As you may know, in September I was appointed the 24th president of my alma mater, Creighton University. My tenure there will commence next July. While it is an honor to be selected as Creighton’s next president, it is truly a bittersweet time for me. For the past seven years, I have been equally honored — and blessed — to serve and work with the extended Saint Joseph’s community. I will miss the extraordinary people and spirit of this great University when I leave Philadelphia for Omaha next June.

At this writing, the Presidential Search Committee, comprised of members of the Jesuit community, University Trustees, faculty, administrators, alumni and students, is working to attract and identify Saint Joseph’s 27th president. I know that the next president will be as impressed as I was by the ardor and commitment of SJU’s alumni community.

The high level of activity at and interest in Saint Joseph’s continues to impress me. We began this academic year by welcoming the Class of 2014, which is the first to pursue studies under the new General Education Program (GEP). Its design allows our students to gain a Catholic and Jesuit education that will enable them to meet the challenges of today’s world as they continue to grow in spirit, and as men and women with and for others.

In this issue of SJU Magazine, you will read about the Latin American Studies (LAS) program. The global reach and international influence of LAS alumni will inspire you. When the faculty sat down to design the GEP, they had this kind of influence in mind. It is clear that, with this close attention to the intellectual development of students, the international influence of our alumni will persist for years to come.

Throughout their time here, members of the Class of 2014 will also witness many exciting changes to the campus. In November, the Merion Hall renovations will be completed, and we’ll see the largest building on the James J. Maguire ’58 Campus come alive with the pursuit of knowledge.

Also in November, we broke ground on the John and Maryanne Hennings Post Learning Commons. This centerpiece of the planned John R. Post ’60 Academic Center, made possible by the generosity of John and Maryanne, is, on so many levels, evidence of their dedication to the Magis.

Finally, groundbreaking for the First-Year Residence Hall, to house 410 students, will occur next spring. Anticipated to open in the fall of 2012, the residence hall will create a new gateway to our campus at City and Cardinal Avenues.

In this magazine, you will also read about our adult students, a vibrant and diverse group of learners in our Graduate Programs and the College of Professional and Liberal Studies. These non-traditional students may not need campus housing, but they do need flexible schedules and creative approaches to class time that help them balance family and career obligations. To me, the work of everyone involved in educating these students demonstrates, in a special way, the great traditions of a Catholic, Jesuit education.

In closing, I would like to say that I am a better person and priest because of the time I have spent at Saint Joseph’s. I have loved it here on Hawk Hill! Reflecting on my experience, I am humbled by your passionate enthusiasm and support of the University. It is you, our alumni, who are our greatest ambassadors.

God’s blessings,

Timothy R. Lannon, S.J.
President

FROM THE PRESIDENT
On the Cover: These images are just a tease for what you’ll find in our photo quiz. Good luck!
1. Exterior door in main archway of Barbelin Hall.
2. Ivy-covered window in Barbelin courtyard.
3. Barbelin archway facing City Avenue.
4. Limestone carving nicknamed “The Watchful Professor” on Barbelin’s main archway along City Avenue.
5. Walk of Jesuitica, a recent addition to Campion Student Center.
6. Iron fencing lining City Ave. and Lapsley Ln.
7. Steeple on Maguire Campus Commons.
10. Main entrance signage of Kinney Center.
11. “John E. Lonergan” inscribed in stone on Lonergan Hall, built in 1932 as an addition to Barbelin.

Features

12 Look Who’s Going Back to School
By Kristen A. Graham
For different reasons and in different ways, adults are returning to school. Meet some of SJU’s “non-traditional” learners.

18 Living Without Boundaries
By Samantha Hansell
By her example and leadership, Christine Rouse ’02 is an inspiration to young people with disabilities.

20 Photo Quiz
Test your visual memory of Hawk Hill!

22 Latin American Studies: Minor in Title, Major in Influence
By Jill Porter
Alumni of the Latin American Studies program show why this program, begun in 1960, is still relevant today.

Departments

2 From the Editor
2 On the Calendar
3 News

26 Advancing
• SJU Dedicates Duperreault and Quinn halls on Maguire Campus
• Alumni Support Completes Maguire Challenge
• Alumni Association Honors D’Ambola ’82 and Gallagher ’94, ’99 with Hogan and Ignatius Awards
• SJU Welcomes John P. McNulty Scholars in Science and Math
• Reunion 2010

30 Alum Notes
Profiles
• Most Rev. Joseph P. McFadden ’69
• W. Dirk Warren, Ph.D. ’50
• Marcia Pendelton ’77

39 Viewpoint
By Tenaya Darlington, M.F.A.

40 EndPoint

SJU MAGAZINE: Published three times annually by Saint Joseph’s University, 5600 City Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19131-1395; distributed free to alumni, parents, friends and faculty/staff of Saint Joseph’s University (circulation 56,000). Online: www.sju.edu/news/magazine.

POSTMASTER: Please send change-of-address correspondence to Development and Alumni Relations, Saint Joseph’s University, 5600 City Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19131-1395. For alumni address changes, visit www.sju.edu/alumni or send e-mail to alumni@sju.edu. Fax: 610-660-3210.

Send editorial correspondence to University Communications, Saint Joseph’s University, 5600 City Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19131-1395 or sjumag@sju.edu.

Saint Joseph’s University is committed to a policy of equal opportunity in every aspect of its operations. The University values diversity and seeks talented students, faculty and staff from a variety of backgrounds. Accordingly, the University does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, gender, sexual orientation, religion, national or ethnic origin, age, marital status or disability in the administration of its admissions, educational, financial aid, employment, athletic or recreational policies and programs.

Questions or concerns regarding the University’s equal opportunity/affirmative action policies and programs or services and accommodations for disabled persons should be directed to the Affirmative Action Officer at 610-660-3336.
We received such a positive reaction to the pop quiz in the Spring 2009 SJJU Magazine, we decided to challenge your knowledge of Saint Joseph’s in another way: a photo quiz.

Last summer, University photographer Melissa Kelly grabbed her camera and snapped her way through campus, using her lens to capture Hawk Hill’s hidden details and iconic images. The result? Hundreds of striking photos — representing the old and the new, the arts, business and the sciences, places that day school students, evening students and alumni would recognize.

As I set out to streamline the photos to just 15 we could include in the magazine, I figured I’d have no problem identifying the unlabeled images. In my 16 years working at Saint Joseph’s University, I’ve observed the campus from north to south, from the new Hawks Landing parking facility at 54th Street to the recently named Quinn and Dupereault halls on Maguire Campus, from around Finnesey Field down to Overbrook Hall and back again. I’ve even benefited from a birds-eye view of the campus when I hopped on a helicopter with a photographer we hired to take aerial images of the campus for the Winter 2006 issue, www.sju.edu/news/magazine/archives/winter06.html. Like I said, I know the campus pretty well.

At least I thought so. But some of Melissa’s original images completely stumped me. A beautifully etched cross in a curved wooden door? Not so difficult. But the sweeping arcs and twists of an ebony wrought iron fence? A brilliant stained glass window I was sure I’d seen in Barbelin a million times? Nope. I had to think again. And again.

Take our quiz and see how well you do. I hope you find it as challenging and fun as I did!

Of course, the real beauty of Saint Joseph’s campus is not in the physical details. It’s in the people. The adult student juggling a job, family and school work. The earnest young student who immerses herself in campus life and overcomes a disability to earn her degree. The forward-looking individual who brings knowledge acquired on campus to a career in an international locale. You’ll read about all of them in this issue of SJJU Magazine.
FR. LANNON’S LEGACY: SJU’S 26TH PRESIDENT TO LEAD CREIGHTON IN 2011

University President Timothy R. Lannon, S.J., will leave Saint Joseph’s at the conclusion of the current academic year to become the president of Creighton University in Omaha, Neb. Creighton’s Board of Directors concluded its search and elected Fr. Lannon as that institution’s 24th president, effective July 2011.

“What Fr. Lannon has brought to Saint Joseph’s over the past seven years, and continues to bring, cannot be celebrated enough,” said Paul J. Hondros ’70 (B.S.), chair of the University’s Board of Trustees. “As we embark on a new academic year, anyone who has worked closely with Fr. Lannon knows that he is not likely to rest until the last step of his own Saint Joseph’s journey is complete.”

Fr. Lannon, a Creighton alumnus and native Midwesterner, made the announcement “with considerably mixed emotions.” Acknowledging that the decision to leave Saint Joseph’s was a very difficult one, he wrote that “we have accomplished tremendous things, and I know that will continue long after I have left Saint Joseph’s University.”

Reflecting on his years at Saint Joseph’s, he said, “Together with the talent and support of the entire University community, Saint Joseph’s has positioned itself to thrive as a dynamic academic institution, dedicated to offering a transformative student experience grounded in the Catholic, Jesuit tradition and the Ignatian vision of educating ‘men and women for others.’”

Fr. Lannon’s departure comes as the University concludes its most ambitious capital campaign, With Faith and Strength to Dare: The Campaign for Saint Joseph’s University, which to date has raised $144 million of its stated $150 million goal. Since beginning his term as Saint Joseph’s 26th president in July 2003, he has been at the helm of major University initiatives, most notably the purchase of Episcopal Academy’s 38-acre Merion campus, now named for James J. Maguire ’58 (B.S.) and significantly expanding opportunities to enhance academic programs and campus life.

During his tenure, the University has extensively upgraded student housing and other facilities including the Campion Student Center, the Science Center and the Alumni Memorial Fieldhouse, now known as the Michael J. Hagan ’85 Arena. Saint Joseph’s broke ground in November for the John and Maryanne Hennings Post Learning Commons, centerpiece of the future John R. Post ’60 Academic Center. In addition, the University’s endowment has doubled, and earlier this year, Fr. Lannon unveiled “Plan 2020: Gateway to the Future,” a 10-year strategic blueprint for Saint Joseph’s growth and positioning over the next decade. He also announced plans to build a new residence hall for 400 first-year students, to be completed by July 2012. He has played a significant role in boosting Saint Joseph’s academic reputation, an effort that includes new endowed faculty chairs and student scholarships, the revision of the undergraduate curriculum, and the opening of the Pedro Arrupe Center for Business Ethics, the Institute of Catholic Bioethics and the Kinney Center for Autism Education and Support.

The University’s Board of Trustees is preparing for the presidential transition at the end of the academic year and will soon announce plans for the search for SJU’s 27th president, Hondros noted.

A native of Mason City, Iowa, Fr. Lannon attended Creighton University, where he was student body president, and later became president of Creighton Preparatory School. He holds graduate degrees from the Weston Jesuit School of Theology (now Boston College School of Theology and Ministry) as well as a doctorate in administration, planning and social policy from the Graduate School of Education at Harvard University.
FOOD MARKETING STUDENTS TOUR EUROPEAN MARKETS

Food Marketing students participated in a European study tour to Germany, Austria, Switzerland and France last spring. The experience was designed to give students a better understanding of how globalization affects food marketing in French- and German-speaking countries. Students observed food farming, production and retailing facilities throughout these countries.

The trip featured a personal tour by Erivan Haub, namesake of the Haub School of Business, and his wife, Helga, and son, Georg, through one of their successful food retail locations and a lunch at their renowned Alpine hotel, The Alpenhof in Murnau. Students stayed for several nights at the Haub’s Seminarhotel Sonnenhof in the Black Forest.

The tour provided participants with a new perspective on international food marketing. “It is much more of a global marketplace than I thought,” said food marketing major Chris Kender ‘11. “It was interesting to see the cultural differences in how the stores were set up and food was marketed.”

TRUSTEES APPOINTED, TAKE ON ROLES BEYOND SJU

Gerianne Tringali DiPiano ‘92 (M.B.A.), Ambassador David F. Girard-diCarlo ’70 (B.S.), John J. Griffin Jr. ’78 (M.B.A.) and Joseph J. McLaughlin Jr. ’81 (B.S.) have joined the Saint Joseph’s University Board of Trustees. They possess a wide range of expertise in business, education, health care and government.

Additionally, current board members C. Kevin Gillespie, S.J. ’72 (B.S.), and Christine M. Wiseman have taken on new leadership roles. Fr. Gillespie was recently appointed associate provost for centers at Loyola University Chicago where he will provide strategic coordination of the university’s Centers of Excellence. Wiseman was named the 19th president of Saint Xavier University in May 2010. Her term commenced on May 1.

• DiPiano is founder, president, CEO and chair of the board of directors of Femmepharma Global Healthcare, Inc., and former director of the University’s pharmaceutical MBA program. She is currently executive vice chair of the Drexel University Board of Trustees, among other advisory board positions. She has earned awards as a Woman of Distinction by the Philadelphia Business Journal and as one of Pennsylvania’s 51 Best Women in Business.

• Girard-diCarlo has more than two decades of experience as a CEO and chairman of a Philadelphia professional services firm and 30 years of political savvy. He was honored by the late Pope John Paul II for his work as chairman of Business Leaders Organized for Catholic Schools and was appointed ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the Republic of Austria in 2008. He is a member and shareholder of the international law firm Cozen O’Connor in Philadelphia, one of the 100 largest law firms in the country.

• Griffin is president and co-founder of Zeke Capital Advisors, LLC, an investment firm in Berwyn, Pa., with nearly $1 billion under advisement. Previously, he was a partner at Chartwell Investment Capital Advisors, LLC, an investment firm in Berwyn, Pa.

• McLaughlin, president of Saint Joseph’s Accounting Alumni Chapter, is chairman and CEO of the Haverford Trust Company in Radnor, Pa. With 25 years of experience in the investment industry, he is on the board of trustees of Paoli Memorial Hospital Foundation and the Rosemont School of the Holy Child.

NEW PROGRAMS MEET GROWING DEMAND

Saint Joseph’s has developed new academic options for adult students and professionals looking to continue their education and advance their careers, as well as for traditional undergraduate students.

• The Erivan K. Haub School of Business will offer an online MBA program, an online master’s degree in financial services (M.S.F.S.) and a traditional master’s degree in business intelligence (M.S.B.I.) beginning in January 2011. The online MBA allows for the flexibility of online learning, or a combination of traditional and online classes. The M.S.F.S. program offers similar flexibility and is one of the few in the nation and in the Philadelphia area to be both AACSB-accredited and CFP®-certified. The M.S.B.I. degree is earned through traditional, on-campus course work and remains one of the only business intelligence graduate programs in the Philadelphia region taught in a business school context. www.sju.edu/graduate.

• The College of Professional and Liberal Studies added a new certificate program in Autism Studies (see page 6), in addition to a gaming and animation certificate and concentration option as part of the traditional B.S. in professional and liberal studies. The certificate program is comprised of six courses focused on 3-D animation, storyline composition and technical skill development. www.sju.edu/pls/programs.

• The College of Arts and Sciences has added two new majors. Ancient studies offers two concentrations, classics and ancient cultures, and religious studies focuses on the study of one or more non-Christian religions. A new minor in environmental and sustainability studies prepares students for careers where they will identify and study the causes and effects of current and future environmental challenges, educate others about the environment, and help write and analyze related policy. www.sju.edu/academics/cas.
PARTNERSHIP INFUSES PHILADELPHIA CATHOLIC SCHOOLS WITH SJU TEACHING TALENT

This semester, 14 recent graduates from schools around the nation are serving as teaching fellows in Philadelphia as part of the launch of the Alliance for Catholic Education Program at SJU (ACESJU). The two-year Teaching Fellows program places college graduates in under-resourced Catholic schools to teach as full-time educators while they pursue a master’s degree in education. Each fellow receives full tuition, free housing in the Molyneux House in Manayunk, Pa., and a stipend from the program, while each of their respective schools provides health benefits at no cost. The University of Notre Dame founded the program in 1994 and is partnering with the University of Pennsylvania and Saint Joseph’s in the Philadelphia initiative.

Six SJU alumni are a part of the inaugural cohort of Teaching Fellows who each serve in one of the nine participating Catholic elementary schools in Philadelphia. Fellows Desmond Shannon ‘10 (B.S.) and Leya Egea-Hinton ‘10 (B.S.) share a unique tie to the program — they are both graduates of a participating school, the Gesu School. Shannon is teaching at St. Rose of Lima, and Egea-Hinton has returned to her alma mater to teach. “I want to be able to help people the way I was helped when I was younger,” says Egea-Hinton, who is teaching second grade. “If it weren’t for the Gesu School, I wouldn’t be here.”

PRESTIGIOUS FELLOWSHIPS SEND STUDENTS ABROAD

Aaron Bateman ‘12
Political Science major

Bateman was selected to participate in the Arizona Critical Language Institute’s summer immersion program in Russia. After completing intensive language courses, he stayed with a Russian host family to continue his research on regional differences within the Russian Federation. Bateman said his primary goals for the program were “to gain a greater proficiency in the Russian language and obtain a more intimate understanding of the Russian culture and the Russian view on United States foreign policy.” Bateman is also a cadet in the United States Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps program.

Paul Orner ‘12
Asian Studies and International Relations, double major

Orner was awarded a Critical Language Scholarship from the U.S. Department of State to further his study of Mandarin at the Beijing Language and Culture University in China this past summer. He will remain abroad through the entire 2010-11 academic year. Currently, he is in China at the Beijing Center for Chinese Studies, and in the spring, he will travel to Japan to study at Tokyo’s Sophia University and continue his study of the history and politics of East Asia.

Katherine Oaks ‘12
Sociology major

Oaks is studying at the University of Aberdeen, Scotland, for one year with a full scholarship from the Saint Andrew’s Society of Philadelphia. She was selected for one of five annual scholarships by the Society, which was established in 1747 to serve Scottish immigrants. The Society awards scholarships to promote understanding between the United States and Scotland. Oaks will continue her examination of poverty in rural and urban environments, and develop research models for building sustainable community-based partnerships.

SJU AND NEW INSURANCE AND RISK MANAGEMENT PROGRAM RANK NATIONALLY

For the 13th consecutive year, Saint Joseph’s was ranked in the top 15 master’s universities in the North, according to U.S. News & World Report. In its inaugural year, SJU’s insurance and risk management program also ranked 11th nationally in undergraduate business specialties. In a separate survey, SJU was rated among the best colleges in the Northeast by The Princeton Review.
FROM TRACKS TO TRAIL, ANALYZING PLANT DIVERSITY

SJU botanist Karen Snetselaar, Ph.D., chair and professor of biology, worked with four students with Summer Scholars grants. They collected, preserved and analyzed plant, seed and soil specimens along the Cynwyd Heritage Trail, which is located along SEPTA’s old R6 Line in Lower Merion. The findings will be shared with the Township and potentially future Trail visitors when it is officially opened to the public next year.

Nadia Pollard (from Lincoln University), Megan Smith ’11 and Peggy Nguyen ’11 with Snetselaar. Not pictured: Brian Calhoon ’12.

KINNEY PROGRAMS SUPPORT INTEREST IN HIGHER ED

The University’s Kinney Center for Autism Education and Support is helping students with Asperger’s Syndrome or high-functioning autism find their way to college.

Last July, using Saint Joseph’s campus as a model, the Kinney Center hosted its first annual college-bound retreat designed to provide teens with Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD) a comprehensive look at higher education. In addition to identifying which schools are successfully supporting those with ASD, attendees learned about living away from home, choosing an area of study and using social skills to navigate a college campus and manage relationships. A presentation and discussion of college life through the eyes of a student with ASD was also offered.

“Deciding to pursue higher education and choosing a school are major decisions for any young adult and their family, and for those with Asperger’s or autism, there is additional stress,” said Michelle Rowe, Ph.D., executive director of the Kinney Center, seeks to be a national model for assisting students with autism at the college level. “Many individuals with Asperger’s syndrome or high-functioning autism can achieve great success, but most require more individualized supports to reach their goals. Students with Autism Spectrum Disorders who are interested in attending college should begin taking steps toward those goals as early as possible.”

According to Rowe, the transition into college can be particularly difficult for individuals with Asperger’s syndrome and/or high-functioning autism and their parents. University environments are substantially different from high school. By attending the college-bound retreat, these individuals learned about academic and social supports designed to help them achieve success in the classroom and a competitive workforce.

The University’s College of Professional and Liberal Studies is also working with the Kinney Center to prepare parents, educational support personnel and interested members of the community to assist a growing population of individuals with autism. The new certificate program in autism studies teaches students common theories relating to autism. www.kinneyautism.sju.edu

SJU CELEBRATES DIVERSITY

Saint Joseph’s encouraged the University community to “Experience Diversity” during a weeklong series of events in September. Students were invited to create messages and images celebrating diversity and inclusion on a diversity quilt, displayed on campus.

Diversity Week also featured videos and conversations about race, including a session led by renowned diversity trainer Lee Mun Wah on his film, “Color of Fear.” He gave the week’s keynote speech titled “The World Is All Around Us,” and led discussions on conflict resolution.
MACLEAN CHAIR STUDIES SACRAMENTS AND THE CULTURE OF CHRISTIANITY

Bruce Morrill, S.J., joins the University community for this academic year as the Donald I. MacLean, S.J., Chair. Fr. Morrill comes to Saint Joseph’s from Boston College, where he has taught since 1996. Among his areas of research are systematic theology, focusing on the sacraments and liturgical theology, and political theology.

He has published numerous articles and six books in his areas of research. His official lecture at SJU, “Public Catholicism or Private Faith: What’s on the Line in the Communion Procession?” discussed changes in how contemporary Americans, both lay and hierarchical, Christian and from other religions, view and participate in receiving Holy Communion.

While at Saint Joseph’s, he is teaching Sacramental Rites in Contemporary Catholicism. “It’s a seminar where we’ll explore the place and function of sacraments, symbols and rituals in the lives of Christians,” Fr. Morrill said. “I want the students to be able to describe and analyze some of the rites themselves, especially the Eucharist.” His students are required to participate in a field-based project for their term papers, pairing them with churches, both Catholic and non-Catholic, where they will be participant observers in the churches’ liturgies.

ERIVAN K. HAUB SCHOOL OF BUSINESS
STEVEN MILLER, PH.D.
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF FINANCE

Assistant Professor of Finance Steven Miller, Ph.D., says he fell into the risk management and insurance field for two reasons — the array of exciting career opportunities that were available to him and his love of puzzles. In his words, risk management is “part common sense, part initiative to help an organization meet its objectives and part problem solving.”

The newest member of Saint Joseph’s finance department, Miller was instrumental in building the risk management and insurance major and serves as the program’s first full-time, tenure-track faculty member. His research interests include the impact of enterprise risk management and corporate governance within the insurance industry. Last summer, Miller presented two papers at the World Risk and Insurance Economic Congress in Singapore.

After earning an undergraduate degree in finance and risk management at the University of Wisconsin, Miller entered a consulting firm’s executive program and worked as a consultant practice leader and manager of European services for the leading insurance broker and risk adviser, Marsh, USA.

Miller believes that his skill set in risk management and insurance made him more competitive in the job market and led to exciting career offers and advancement opportunities. He hopes to share that advantage with his students. “My goal for the risk management and insurance major, and for myself as an individual member of this department, is to help current students build the foundation for their careers and develop professionally,” says Miller.

BACTERIAL LEAF SCORCH RESEARCH CONDUCTED ON CAMPUS

Some of the withered, browning leaves (pictured) on trees across campus are due to a systemic, fatal bacterial disease causing leaf scorch. SJU biologist Clint Springer, Ph.D., is overseeing research investigating how climate change affects the progress of the disease, which is not unique to Pennsylvania and is spread by an insect called a leafhopper. Last summer, Will Puetz ’11 and biology master’s student Celia Del Cid contributed to the ongoing mapping of infected oaks on campus based on Susan Jackson’s ’07 (M.S.) initial research and analysis of its spread.

— Colleen DeFruscio ’10 (M.A.)
Assistant Professor of Sociology Susan Clampet-Lundquist, Ph.D., spent the summer revisiting Baltimore, a city she says she loves almost as much as Philadelphia. According to Clampet-Lundquist, Baltimore is ripe with learning opportunities for a sociologist interested in the inner workings of urban neighborhoods and how places inform lives.

Her visit was funded with more than $400,000 from the W.T. Grant Foundation to follow up with families who were part of the Moving to Opportunity (MTO) initiative of the mid-’90s. MTO is a federal research-based demonstration that offers the chance for very low-income families living in public housing to move to low-poverty neighborhoods. Clampet-Lundquist, along with Kathryn Edin, Ph.D., of Harvard and Stefanie DeLuca, Ph.D., of Johns Hopkins, spent the summer working with a team of graduate students from Saint Joseph’s and nearby universities interviewing young adults (ages 15-24) whose families had participated in MTO. They sought to understand how MTO may have improved their well-being and how youth transition to adulthood, particularly in the areas of education, employment, family formation, risk behavior and mental health.

“There’s been a great deal of research on transitions to adulthood,” said Clampet-Lundquist. “But the majority of this research does not look specifically at low-income young people. I’m interested in what happens to economically disadvantaged kids who don’t have access to the same opportunities as middle-class youth.”

Ultimately, Clampet-Lundquist hopes her summer research in Baltimore will inform policy regarding public housing and community development programs aimed at improving the health and well-being of American at-risk youth.

Clampet-Lundquist has an article about outcomes for MTO teens in Baltimore and Chicago forthcoming in the American Journal of Sociology and plans to author more articles on the topic. She holds two master’s degrees, one from Temple University and the other from the University of Pennsylvania, where she also earned her doctoral degree in sociology.

— Kelly Welsh ’05 (M.A.)

SPEECH AND DEBATE TEAM ACHIEVES NATIONAL STANDING

The 2009-10 Villiger Speech and Debate team ranked nationally at competitions of the American Forensics Association (AFA) and National Forensics Association (NFA). The two associations are the gold standards for speech and debate competition at the collegiate level.

James McGraw ’10 (B.A.), who served as president of the team, won the national championship in Informative Speaking. He also placed fifth in Impromptu Speaking and finished in the top 24 in three other categories, garnering him a national ranking of fourth overall at the AFA competition. Current team president Joe Dineen ’11 ranked sixth overall in Impromptu Speaking and in the top 24 in After Dinner Speaking at the AFA. These accomplishments contributed to the team’s No. 15 finish in the country.

In the NFA tournament, the team ranked No. 9 in the country. McGraw earned a No. 2 ranking overall — a first for an SJU student. The encompassing rank resulted from various wins, including a national championship win in the Communication Analysis category, third place in Extemporaneous Speaking and Informative Speaking, sixth in Impromptu Speaking, a top 12 finish in After Dinner Speaking and a top 24 placement in Persuasion.

PHILADELPHIA FIRE DEPARTMENT HONORS SJU

The City of Philadelphia Fire Department presented a Fire Prevention Partnership Award to the University for its role in supporting its fire prevention efforts. Saint Joseph’s is a longtime sponsor of the Citywide Fire Prevention Essay Contest for middle school students and the annual Fire Prevention Drama Contest, which invites youths to perform at Bluett Theatre on campus.
The Saint Joseph’s men’s Freshman 8 won a gold medal at the 72nd Annual Aberdeen Dad Vail Regatta in May. The Hawk men’s and women’s teams combined to win the Bratton Trophy for total points earned as they collected one gold medal, two silvers and four bronze.

Additionally, the women’s Varsity 8 competed at the prestigious Henley Royal Regatta on the River Thames in Oxfordshire, England (above), by way of its second-place finish at the Dad Vail. Marking the second trip to Henley for the Hawks, the squad fell just short of advancing.

Front, from left: Brianne Kammerman ’11, Clare Burns ’11, Lauren Rozsits ’11, Danielle Brady ’11; back: Colleen Smith ’11, Bridget Dempsey ’11, Andi Hartfield ’10, Christina DiSanto ’10, Katie Herdmann ’11, Tina Regan ’10, Colleen Greway ’10.

Front, from left: Mike Walsh ’13, coxswain Billy MacKenzie ’10, John Lesko ’13, John Granville ’13; back: Assistant Coach Dan Goettner, Chris Higgins ’13, Pat Kenney ’13, Jamal Anderson ’13, Justin Stephano ’13, Marc Ioli ’13, Assistant Coach Ryan Bonner.
NCAA RECOGNIZES SEVEN TEAMS FOR ACADEMICS

Seven Saint Joseph’s University athletic teams earned Public Recognition Awards from the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) in May for their Academic Progress Rate (APR) scores.

The APR provides a real-time look at a team’s academic success each semester by tracking the academic progress of each student-athlete. Teams that were recognized posted multi-year APR scores in the top 10 percent of all squads in their respective sports. Baseball, women’s lacrosse, women’s rowing, women’s soccer, women’s tennis, women’s indoor track and women’s outdoor track earned the NCAA recognition.

This is the highest number of SJU teams singled out at one time. Of the 234 schools cited, only 30 of them had seven or more teams recognized, putting Saint Joseph’s in the top 10 percent of all NCAA Division I institutions. Among Atlantic 10 schools, Saint Joseph’s tied with Xavier for the second highest number of teams recognized. Fordham led the league with 11 teams recognized in conference-sponsored sports.

ALUMNUS GRANTS WISHES, INSPIRES STUDENT ORGANIZATION

With so much ahead of them, most college students aren’t thinking about the end of life, but those that participate in Shooting Stars are a little different. They grant wishes — last wishes — as volunteers at Sacred Heart Home’s hospice center.

“It’s important to remember the people that have come before us and the lessons they have to offer,” said Ed Podgorski ’09 (B.S.), who founded the unique student organization last year. “Any little bit of life we can give them goes a long way.”

His inspiration for the organization came from a relationship with a Sacred Heart patient he met through a Christian medical ethics class at SJU. Podgorski personally started granting the patient’s wishes, along with others at Sacred Heart. Shooting Stars continues the legacy at Saint Joseph’s, ensuring that each Sacred Heart patient has the opportunity to have a wish granted.

“We’ve fulfilled a range of wishes so far, from a patient requesting a burger from a favorite fast food place, to trips to the zoo and the aquarium with our members,” says Andy Iriza ’11, the first president of Shooting Stars. “It’s important to me that wishes continue to get granted, and Shooting Stars continues to grow.”

TWO ATHLETES MAKE SJU AND A10 HISTORY

Two Saint Joseph’s student-athletes — softball player Brooke Darreff ’10 (B.S.) and cross country/track athlete Kyle Murray ’10 (B.S.) — were named as recipients of the Atlantic 10 Sporting Award, in voting conducted among the senior women administrators at each of the Conference’s 14 institutions. Darreff and Murray are the first-ever SJU student-athletes to win this award. It also marks the first time in conference history that both recipients were from the same institution. Darreff and Murray also attended the same high school — Central Bucks South in Warrington, Pa.

The Sporting Award is presented annually to a male and female student-athlete who exemplify good sportsmanship. To be nominated, a student-athlete must be a member of an intercollegiate athletics team in a sport sponsored by the Atlantic 10 Conference; be in good academic standing; be active within the campus community; embody the highest standards of leadership, integrity and sporting conduct; be enthusiastic about the sport in which they compete; and have noteworthy act(s) of sporting conduct.

Photo: Greg Camarco

Podgorski ’09 (left) delivers the wish box to Ray Cless (right), a hospice patient at Sacred Heart Home in Philadelphia.

Photo: Samuel Getty

Darreff ’10

Murray ’10
ALUMNUS, CANCER-SURVIVOR BIKES ACROSS AMERICA

Phil Bayliss '09 (B.B.A., right) and his best friend, Jon Triantafyllou, completed an improbable 4,300-mile bike tour from Ocean Beach Park in San Diego, Calif. (above), to Sea Isle City, N.J., as part of Bike Towards the Cure (www.biketowardsthecure.org). Bayliss, a 23-year-old thyroid cancer survivor, Triantafyllou and four Saint Joseph’s MBA students founded the nonprofit organization and developed its marketing strategy and website as part of an independent study under the direction of Ron DuFresne, Ph.D., assistant professor of management. They have raised more than $18,000 for cancer research.

PROFESSOR EARNED FELLOWSHIP TO STUDY OVERSEAS

Paul Patterson, Ph.D., assistant professor of English, conducted research at Cambridge University through the Newberry Library and British Academy Fellowship. Given to only two American scholars each year for study in the United Kingdom, the fellowship awarded Patterson the equivalent of about $4,000 to carry out his research.

The Cambridge University Library contains one of the original manuscripts of the devotional text of interest to Patterson, Mirror to Devout People. Also known as the Speculum devotorum, the Middle English text was written by a monk at the Carthusian monastery of Sheen, in Surrey, for a sister of the Bridgettine Syon Abbey in Isleworth, Middlesex. After examining a number of late-fourteenth and early-fifteenth century texts, Patterson hopes to complete a new edition of the Mirror to Devout People for the Early English Text Society.

"Research incorporating original sources and manuscripts is an important aspect of the field of medieval studies," he said. "It was exciting to be able to spend time in Cambridge consulting one of the original manuscripts."

SJU HOSTS INAUGURAL EASTERN CONVERSATIONS CONFERENCE

Saint Joseph’s University hosted the inaugural meeting of Eastern Conversations, a gathering of faculty and mission and identity officers from East Coast Jesuit colleges and universities intended to strengthen collaborative efforts, create lasting connections and foster dialogue between institutions. More than 70 individuals, representing all 12 of the East Coast Jesuit colleges and universities, attended the conference, which was focused around the themes of identifying today’s students and balancing the demands of academic life while also contributing to the shared mission of cura personalis.

“There are annual, national conferences for administrators of the 28 American Jesuit institutions, but none for faculty,” said Springs Steele, Ph.D., Saint Joseph’s vice president for mission and identity. “The West Coast and Midwest schools have regional faculty gatherings each year, but there has never been one for those on the East Coast. With the encouragement of Fr. Lannon, we were happy to develop and host the first.”

NEW MEDIA CENTER OPENS

Media-minded students like Sam Koch ‘11, editor-in-chief of The Hawk student newspaper, enjoy the state-of-the-art technology and generous space in Simpson Hall’s New Media Center. Made possible by the University’s Opportunity Fund, the center houses The Hawk, the Saint Joseph’s radio station and 1851 Records, the University record label.
The benefits of lifelong learning have never been more important than they are today. Nontraditional students — adults — are returning to school in record numbers, searching for opportunity in an uncertain economy.

By Kristen A. Graham
Nichole Pugliese ’10 followed a traditional path — high school graduation, then straight on to college, studying art therapy. But she quickly discovered school wasn’t for her, and at 19, she dropped out. A career in fashion buying and merchandising followed, jobs with Tommy Hilfiger and Ralph Lauren. Eventually, she moved to Philadelphia and picked up jobs at a gym, teaching yoga and in retail. But none felt permanent.

One Christmas, Pugliese’s mother suggested she return to school and offered to help. As a gift to her parents, she agreed. Pugliese e-mailed a number of schools for information about their night programs, and was wowed by the warm response she received at Saint Joseph’s University’s College of Professional and Liberal Studies (PLS). “Everyone has always said, ‘What can we do? How can we help you?’” says Pugliese.

She worked and attended school full-time, majoring in elementary and special education, inspired by her brother, who is dyslexic. Five years into the program — 10 years after she should have graduated, she points out — Pugliese earned her bachelor’s degree.

Nationwide, about 6.8 million adult learners — students 25 and older — are enrolled at colleges and universities, according to the National Center for Education Statistics. Experts expect this number to rise, as more and more jobs require higher education. And the traditional class delivery methods alone won’t work — most adult students balance family, work and other obligations and need classes offered at night and on weekends, in accelerated format. “They’re an integral part of who we are as a university, and who we will continue to be,” said Provost Brice Wachterhauser, Ph.D.

These days, Pugliese is enrolled in a Saint Joseph’s graduate program to earn her master’s degree in special education. She’s still juggling — two online classes, a graduate assistantship, plus a practicum at a school for students with learning disabilities. It’s hectic, but worth it, she says. “I haven’t had a social life in a long time,” Pugliese says, laughing. “But I’m so glad I did this when I did it. I feel much more prepared.”

What sets undergraduate adult students apart is not so much their ages as their life stories — the 33-year-old single mother, the 60-year-old professional businessman, the 25-year-old young woman who realizes that college is finally for her. There are 750 PLS students at SJU — about 60 percent are women, 45 percent are students of color and 20 percent attend school full-time.

For nearly 100 years, Saint Joseph’s University has served the needs of the adult learner. As early as 1915, “the College” offered courses in what was then the Night School — the precursor to the modern College of Professional and Liberal Studies. It seemed only natural. Today, through undergraduate, graduate, and certificate programs, on campus and online, via accelerated courses, flexible schedules and off-campus programs, the University offers a growing number of adults an increasing number of choices to reach their educational goals.

“Our adult students truly live the Jesuit ideal of the Magis — they want more in their lives, they want more for their families and their communities. There’s a real sense of commitment. Their diversity brings a richness to Saint Joseph’s, but it also brings a challenge; the needs of the adult student are constantly changing.”

To Richard George, Ph.D. ’67 (B.S.), professor of food marketing and a former dean of PLS (then called University College), “When adult students get to the classroom, they have every bit as much talent as traditional undergraduates, and perhaps a bit more motivation.” They also set a strong example for others. “One of our goals as an organization should be that everyone should be a lifelong learner,” George says. “The adult student understands that.”

In 2009, what had been called University College officially changed its name to the College of Professional and Liberal Studies. Some programs were transitioned out and others tailored to the modern needs of adult students were started — students can now complete a certificate in autism studies or gaming and animation.

Naiomi Chardon ’05

She was the test case. Working as the marketing director at Merck Sharpe & Dohme, Naiomi Chardon wanted to pursue graduate studies. Her boss said that the company would pay for Chardon’s courses, and if she was successful, extend the benefit to others. She looked for a program that was flexible and well-respected in her field.

Saint Joseph’s fit the bill — even though she lived and worked in Puerto Rico, thousands of miles away from the campus on City Avenue. The online program in pharmaceutical marketing, which Chardon entered in 2003, made it possible. Flexibility became key when Chardon became pregnant and could not travel to give the final presentation for her capstone course.

“I had so many reasons not to finish,” Chardon says. “But everyone at Saint Joseph’s was very accommodating, and that meant a lot.” Her professors arranged for her to deliver her presentation live, via videoconference. She finished the capstone course on April 30, 2005, and delivered her first child six days later.

Although she had 12 years’ experience in the pharmaceutical marketing field, her graduate courses challenged Chardon and enriched her career. “I remember a lot of meetings where I was able to contribute more because of all the knowledge from my professors,” she says. “They were great, very up-to-date. They shared problems from the real world.”

Though Chardon had every intention of returning to her job after her baby was born, she ended up working with her husband on a business plan that won a prestigious local competition. The Rebexa Group, the couple’s pharmaceutical consulting firm, a one-stop shop for compliance services with clients in Central America and the Caribbean, launched in 2006. A busy executive and now mother to two young children, Chardon still finds the degree valuable. A local university recently asked her to work as a marketing professor. There’s no time now, but the offer spoke volumes. “It’s a result of my M.B.A. from Saint Joseph’s,” she says.
Room 117 in Barbelin Hall is a haven for adult learners — unlike other students, they can do everything from register for classes to see an advisor to sign up for graduation in the PLS office. Having a central place for adult undergraduate learners to conduct Saint Joseph’s business is a real asset, says Gallagher, who has a master’s degree in adult education. She should know. Gallagher is a graduate of the former Evening Division herself.

In response to the rise of adult students on campus, the Adult and Off Campus Student Life Office was opened last year to provide resources and remove obstacles for them. Through its in-person and online resources, adult learners can find practical information — a campus map, places to meet before and after classes, tutorials on programs such as Blackboard and Skype, information on where to go for financial aid resources, or an adult-specific orientation.

Nancy Komada, senior director of the office, says her job is to advocate for the needs and wants of the adult learner at Saint Joseph’s. “The student life piece is crucial,” says Komada. “For adult students, it’s about convenience — what’s close, what’s easy? The adult student has many educational options, and we want them to choose Saint Joseph’s.” Komada might help an adult student straighten out a parking problem or resolve an issue with a multitasking lifestyle — assistance with these concerns makes a big difference.

And while adult undergraduate enrollment has risen, so, too, has the adult population in the University’s graduate programs. As associate dean for graduate programs in the College of Arts and Sciences, Sabrina DeTurk, Ph.D., has seen a real shift in the demand for online programs. While enrollment in on-campus programs remains steady, the demand for online education has spiked. Graduate degrees in subjects such as education, criminal justice and health administration can be completed entirely online — and often are, by students who live in the region and across the country. As with the University’s other programs, Arts and Sciences’ graduate enrollment has received a boost from workers who are looking to get an edge on the competition or those who have been laid off due to the poor economy.

“We’re seeing a trend toward more people enrolling in their late 20s to early 30s,” DeTurk says. “People are seeing a graduate degree as a requirement for advancement earlier in their career.” And often, they’re picking Saint Joseph’s because of a recommendation from a colleague or a family member. “We have a lot of alumni who are referring people to us, a lot of alums who teach,” she says.

Greater numbers of adult students have also been enrolling in Haub School of Business (HSB) programs. “We’ve grown tremendously in the past 10 years,” says Stephen Porth, Ph.D. ’80 (B.S.), associate dean for academic affairs and executive director of graduate business programs. “We were recently... listed as having the largest MBA program in the Delaware Valley by the Philadelphia Business Journal.” (September 24-30, 2010)

Saint Joseph’s offered its first master of business administration degrees in 1978, and beginning in January 2011, the business school will offer the degree online for the first time. HSB offers nine different graduate programs, from an Executive MBA to a master’s degree in finance and niche programs in food marketing and pharmaceutical marketing. More than 1,000 students are enrolled, up from about 600 a decade ago. Enrollment is up 13.4 percent over last year, in part because of the tough economy. “It’s counter-cyclical,” says Porth. “When the economy is bad, more people are looking to position themselves for the future in terms of their education.”

As always, paying close attention to adult learners’ needs is key. “We’ve been as flexible as the market demands,” Porth says. Programs are offered on campus, online and at remote locations such as Vanguard’s headquarters in Chester County, Pa., and the ACE Center in Lafayette Hill, Pa. Also growing is the number of places from which students hail.

“We’ve established a strong reputation in China and India,” says Porth. “We have earned national rankings in many areas that are appealing to Chinese and Indian students.” In the future, the University will look toward other spots in Asia, plus South America and Europe, for students.

As long as 10 years ago, Saint Joseph’s officials realized online education would help the university grow, particularly among adult students. They were right. According to Associate Provost Paul DeVito, Ph.D., 1,000 students enrolled in less than three years.

“I think it demonstrates the value of an SJU degree beyond the local region,” he says. “It also speaks to the academic quality of these professionally oriented programs, which are built upon a strong liberal arts foundation, housed in the Ignatian tradition of adult education, and created with a strong emphasis on social responsibility.”

Robert Palestini, Ph.D. ’63 (B.S.), ’67 (M.S.), associate professor of education and the former dean of graduate and continuing studies, teaches adult students in online courses. The format is different than traditional classes, he says, but not the quality. He believes online courses produce rich discussions and thoughtful analysis. “I’ve had students from Japan, the Dakotas, all over the U.S.,” Palestini says. “St. Joes can be proud of the fact that its online courses can stack up to any in the United States.”

Kristen Graham is a freelance writer.
Christine Rouse ’02 (B.S.) is an active woman. She leads two nonprofit organizations she founded herself. She offers motivational workshops. For a change of pace, she rows on the often choppy waters of Philadelphia’s Schuylkill River. At other times, she puts her power behind her tennis racket or into the pool swimming laps.

She’s an active woman, and she just happens to have a disability.

Rouse, 36, has cerebral palsy, a neurological condition that affects body movement and muscle coordination.

While there are some things she can’t do, the things she can do and has done are more significant.

Rouse is founder and executive director of Acting Without Boundaries (AWB) and AWB Jr., year-round theater programs that provide an outlet for the creative expression of children, teenagers and young adults with physical disabilities (www.christinerouse.com). Since AWB began in 2004 — AWB Jr. came along two years later — Rouse has offered an opportunity for these young people to be part of a group in which they are the majority. The norm. Themselves without judgment.

“It becomes like a family,” Rouse says of the group, noting that most of the kids have participated since AWB began.
Originally located on the Saint Joseph’s University campus, AWB’s office is now in Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Acting Without Boundaries consists of monthly workshops for its two age groups — 12-30 and 4-11 (AWB Jr.) — led by professional musical and acting staff. Once a year, each group offers a public performance. Rouse was introduced to the idea when she attended the National Theater Workshop for the Handicapped (www.ntwh.org), founded by Rick Curry, S.J. ’68 (B.A.).

She participated in Fr. Curry’s program in Maine after earning her elementary education degree at Saint Joseph’s. It was her first experience producing a show, being independent from her family and meeting other people with challenges.

“I felt I didn’t have to hide my disability,” she says. And that’s exactly the feeling she wants to bring to others.

“I wanted kids with physical disabilities to have a good experience and develop lifelong friendships,” Rouse says. “It’s not just about acting and putting on a play — it’s about cultivating friendships.”

Still, the groups have wowed audiences by performing shows like “Aladdin,” “You’re a Good Man, Charlie Brown,” “Pippin,” and most recently, “Grease,” in October. And Rouse is always there, quietly watching the fulfillment of one of AWB’s mottos: “Celebrating ability in disability.”

“They are our stars,” she says. “You can’t believe them on stage. A lot of people say they don’t see the disability.”

In 1994, Rouse received the Presidential Award from the American Academy for Cerebral Palsy and Developmental Medicine for her dedication to educating children about disabilities. In 2006, AWB performed at a conference of the World Congress on Disabilities, a nonprofit organization whose mission is “to educate, inform and provide a useful exchange of ideas for people with disabilities and special health care needs and those involved in their care and development.”

Despite her confidence and accomplishments, which also include the founding of Kids Are Kids, a disabled-awareness educational workshop, Rouse has been hurt by insensitive words and actions throughout her life. She doesn’t like to dwell on the negative experiences, but parts of adolescence were difficult, she says.

While in high school, she started Kids Are Kids, whose theme is “What makes us different makes us beautiful.” She continues to travel to schools to educate children so they will make a conscious choice to act with sensitivity and empathy when encountering someone with a disability.

On these visits, kids typically ask, “What is it like to have cerebral palsy?” Rouse explains, “Physically it does not hurt, but when kids teased me it hurt my feelings.”

She tells them stories from her life. She discusses the successes of celebrities with disabilities. She makes students button a shirt with socks on their hands to simulate having a disability. While kids can be cruel, Rouse says they can also be very receptive to people with differences when they understand them better.

At Saint Joseph’s, Rouse participated in the Hand in Hand festival, a day of fun for community members with special needs and Saint Joseph’s largest student-run event. She was also a member of the Chapel Choir.

When considering whether to join the choir, she asked the director if she was able to become involved because of her cerebral palsy. His response was short, but oh-so-sweet. “So what?” he said. “Saint Joseph’s is very accepting of everyone,” she says. “That’s what makes it so special and unique.”

Special and unique is exactly how many describe Rouse.

“Christine is one of the most determined and courageous young women I have ever met,” says Jim Scott, director of services for students with disabilities. “She was an inspiration to all of us. She led by example, and her accomplishments to date are an indication of what the future holds for her.”

Rouse said the school was very accommodating of her disability. And although it took her six years to earn her degree in elementary education, “I did it. It was a huge accomplishment. It just took a while.”

Now one of Rouse’s AWB students, who started in the group at 13, has followed her to Hawk Hill.

“Christine’s love for SJU was always apparent, and when I was looking at colleges, SJU did fit what I wanted for my own goals in life,” says freshman Hannah Brannau, who hopes to follow Rouse’s example in more than just her college choice. “Christine is our inspiration. Without her, I wouldn’t have gotten out of my shell. She puts herself out there, with confidence and a huge smile. I couldn’t be more grateful for her!”

Samantha Hansell is a freelance writer.
Photo Quiz

How well do you know Saint Joseph’s campus? Take our photo quiz and find out! The answers are on page 38.
Carved in stone, I’ll never die.

All the better to see you with, my dear.

This quiet spot has endured for generations.

A deep sea organism? Not possible at this height.

Another campus mascot?

We’ve been watching as you walk through campus.

No stones are cast here.

The Hawks often land here.

All points lead to Hawk Hill.

One of SJU’s ivy towers.

Round and round we go . . .

Female students may have a better idea of where I am.

A new addition to Saint Joseph’s footprint.

Tick, tick, tick . . .

What does a serpent have to do with our identity?
As a UNICEF executive, James Mayrides ’64 (B.S.), helped enable Pakistani girls to attend school, doubled the rate of childhood vaccination in Bolivia, and advised and socialized with prime ministers of developing countries. He also faced down revolutionaries with guns, endured bomb threats at his office and was shot at by rebels.

It’s been a thrilling and very fulfilling life.

Mayrides traces its genesis to a summer he spent in Mexico as part of Saint Joseph’s Latin American Studies (LAS) program. The cultural immersion and language development he experienced in Mexico “broadened my horizons” and gave him the confidence to become an international executive, he says.

Now, more SJU students may have a similar life-altering experience, thanks to a change in the curriculum inaugurated this semester. According to Provost Brice Wachterhauser, Ph.D., the new General Education Program standards require all undergraduates to take one course in any of three categories addressing diversity, globalization or non-Western culture.

Exposure to other cultures, such as in Latin America, “was an element that was missing in the general undergraduate experience,” Wachterhauser says, especially as regular contact increases with individuals whose “background, cultural assumptions and language” differ from “the American paradigm.”

LAS program alumni hailed the curriculum change, to the extent it attracts more students to the field, which is critical to promoting understanding of controversial issues such as immigration. And a study of the region is a tutorial in political evolution.

“Students in the ’60s and ’70s studied authoritarianism and dictatorship,” says Richard Warren, Ph.D., Latin American Studies program director and history professor. “Intervening years have seen a dramatic transformation of Latin American politics. It’s messy. It’s contentious, but in Latin America today, the model of politics is democracy.”

The program, which became an academic minor in 1997, celebrates its 50th anniversary this year. Though not a major, it has had an outsized influence on the lives of its students, many of whom have had international careers and attained tremendous success. The program enables students to pursue traditional majors, such as history, economics and international business and simultaneously complete courses in Latin America leading to the minor.

Charles Shreiner ’50 (B.S.), who has worked in Latin America for the U.S. Food for Peace program and Catholic Relief Services, was the program’s first full-time director. During his tenure, 31 students won international fellowships, including prestigious Fulbright scholarships for a year of study in a Latin American university after graduation. Many LAS students advanced their competence in the Spanish language by studying for a semester at the Jesuit university in Mexico City, Iberoamericana, starting in 1963.

Since he retired in 1993, graduating students have continued the tradition of winning Fulbrights to places like Mexico and Argentina, and moving on to success in volunteer service, government posts, NGOs, private enterprise and graduate studies focused on the region.

The Latin American Studies program was among the first of its kind in the country, and it came at a propitious moment in history, remembers Gabriel Marcella, Ph.D. ’64 (B.S.), who was one of its first students.

“It was a time when JFK was president, when the Peace Corps was established, and when Kennedy urged my generation to become more involved in the world,” says Marcella, a retired professor at the Army War College and one-time advisor to the American military command in Panama. “The notion of studying foreign affairs and dealing with Latin America was very attractive.”

Students such as Mary Malone, Ph.D. ’95 (B.A.), were also deeply influenced by the Jesuit emphasis on community service that was incorporated into the program; most students do service projects during their semesters abroad.
“What I liked about the Latin American Studies program is that it focused on doing things firsthand. It’s really vital, going and seeing how people live.”

Mary Malone Ph.D. ’95 (B.A.)

“In every culture I’ve been in, I try to reach out to what we have in common. Treat everyone with dignity and respect.”

José del C. Paulino ’64 (B.S.)

“The danger was worth it because my work was so fulfilling and influential.”

James Mayrides ’64 (B.S.)

“What I liked about the Latin American Studies program is that it focused on doing things firsthand,” says Malone, a professor of political science at the University of New Hampshire. “It’s really vital, going and seeing how people live.”

Malone was so inspired that she spent a year and a half in Argentina after she graduated, as house mother in an orphanage to 12 children who’d been living on the street. She’s still in touch with some of them.

José del C. Paulino ’64 (B.S.), a pharmaceutical executive who spent 20 years in Latin America, was an early recipient of 41st U.S. President George H.W. Bush’s Points of Light Award for his work as a mentor in New York City schools. “In every culture I’ve been in, I try to reach out to what we have in common,” says Paulino. “Treat everyone with dignity and respect.”

Vanessa Cardinale ’99 (B.A.) lived in Latin America after graduation, doing youth organizing work in El Salvador for two years. “It was really amazing to have this incredible opportunity to travel to the Dominican Republic as part of a January study course in my junior year,” she says. “The program had an incredible impact,” says Cardinale, who graduated earlier this year from Union Theological Seminary and is awaiting ordainment.

Michael Parmly ’73 (B.S.), public affairs counselor for the U.S. Mission to the United Nations in Geneva, credited not only his semester abroad, but the teachings of a professor for continuing to influence his life.

Parmly says that political science professor Anthony Joes, Ph.D. ’65 (B.A.), “taught me vastly more than he ever realized, specifically about respecting another country’s nationalism, which the United States has difficulty doing.” That philosophy has given Parmly “mixed feelings” about the U.S.’s recently revised travel policy to Cuba, where he worked for three years. “The floodgates will open and I’m not sure what I think about it, as hard as I worked for it,” he says.

Parmly was chief of mission in Havana for three years, and is a veteran of more than 33 years at the U.S. State Department, including stints in Afghanistan, Sarajevo, Morocco, Paris, Romania and Spain.

James Mayrides retired from UNICEF in 2000 and now lives in Caln Township, Pa., where “the biggest thing that might happen is that a golf ball may hit the window.” It’s quite a contrast from the life he led for more than 30 years with UNICEF and Catholic Relief Services, where:

• His office in Bogotá was occupied twice in 1979 by armed antigovernment revolutionaries as a show of power. The group leader later became minister of health in a new government, and the two sat next to each other at a lunch and had drinks together.
• He was a firsthand witness to catastrophic earthquakes in Chile and Peru, and floods in Uruguay.

• He once flew in a small plane that was lost in a fog in Uganda; when the pilot flew low to read street signs to gauge their location, rebels rushed from the underbrush and fired on them.

“You’d think, ‘They don’t pay me enough to do this,’ and then you’d go back and do it again,” Mayrides laughs. “The danger was worth it because my work was so fulfilling and influential.”

• When he was UNICEF chief in Pakistan, he chided then Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and encouraged her not to embarrass herself by attending the Conference on Women in Beijing (1995) because her country hadn’t passed the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. She called him personally the following week to say they’d passed it.

• When he learned young girls couldn’t attend school in Pakistan because there were no bathroom facilities — boys could simply go outside — he diverted all the resources he had for water projects to build enclosed latrines. “If we could get the girls into school long enough, they could become literate and understand basic issues relating to health and nutrition,” Mayrides says. “They’re the mothers who are raising the families.”

• His work as the first UNICEF representative in La Paz, Bolivia, helped convince the government to create a children’s health agenda. The number of children under five who were vaccinated during Mayrides’ tenure more than doubled from 45 to 95 percent, and Bolivia became one of the first developing countries to try to eliminate iodine deficiency disorders. When he left, he was awarded the government’s highest honor, never before conferred on a representative of a United Nations agency.

Mayrides has other riveting anecdotes from his life, which go to prove what Latin American Studies Director Warren says about alumni of the program: “As the region has changed, as the relationship between Latin America and the United States has ebbed and flowed over the last half century, it is of note how often Saint Joseph’s alumni have been there, not only to bear witness but to be the agents in shaping these moments and shaping those relationships.”

Jill Porter is a freelance writer.
Dear Fellow Hawks,

The fall semester brings renewed vitality to campus. The energy of the student body is alive in Barbeline Hall, Drexel Library and across campus. This year, however, is different than previous years. The den of construction can be heard on the James J. Maguire ’58 Campus, as the Saint Joseph’s that you and I know begins to take on a new shape. The dramatic changes touted when the University acquired the campus will become more visible as significant academic and administrative buildings come online over the next few months.

One of the earliest signs of this progress occurred October 1 when the University dedicated Margaret Duperreault and Henry A. Quinn ’56 halls. Housing the Office of Development and Alumni Relations, which returned to campus for the first time in more than 14 years, these new buildings provide a relocation to Saint Joseph’s soil and will connect the Alumni Association more closely with the student body.

Now with a home on campus, the Alumni Association has set forth the goal of welcoming more alumni back to Hawk Hill and encouraging students to never truly leave. We want to prepare students for a lifelong relationship with the University, from their first year onward.

As alumni, we have a responsibility to set the precedent by actively engaging in the Saint Joseph’s community. From participating alongside students in National Community Day, attending networking events, serving on alumni panels or returning to campus for Reunion, we can continue to show our spirit, share our intellect and fulfill our purpose as SJU graduates.

Sincerely,

Gina M. Mazzulla ’91 (B.S.)
President
Saint Joseph’s University Alumni Association

SJU DEDICATES DUPERREAULT AND QUINN HALLS ON MAGUIRE CAMPUS

Alumni, students and friends turned out to celebrate on October 1, as the University formally dedicated the first buildings on the James J. Maguire ’58 Campus. Named in honor of Margaret Duperreault and Henry A. Quinn ’56 (B.S.), the buildings, originally constructed in 1908 as private residences, serve as home to the Office of Development and Alumni Relations, bringing those offices back to campus for the first time in over 14 years.

Duperreault Hall is named for the beloved mother of Brian Duperreault ’69 (B.S.), former University Trustee and development committee chair, and a lead donor to With Faith and Strength to Dare: The Campaign for Saint Joseph’s University.

“I am very proud to have my mom’s name forever associated with Saint Joseph’s University,” remarked Duperreault. “Without her and without this University, I would not be who I am today.”

Quinn Hall, previously the home of noted art collector and philanthropist Dr. Albert C. Barnes, was dedicated in honor of the late Hank Quinn ’56 (B.S.), a former University Trustee, Shield of Loyola recipient and highly active alumnus. Quinn’s estate fulfilled a significant pledge in support of the Maguire Campus purchase upon his passing in 2007.

Members of the Duperreault and Quinn families were the guests of honor for the festivities and joined Paul Hondros ’70 (B.S.), SJU Board of Trustees chair, and University President Timothy R. Lannon, S.J., for the ceremony, and dinner in Campion Student Center’s banquet facility.

ALUMNI SUPPORT COMPLETES MAGUIRE CHALLENGE

Seven years ago the Maguire family embraced the vision to place Saint Joseph’s on the path to preeminence, boldly stepping forward as lead donors in With Faith and Strength to Dare: The Campaign for Saint Joseph’s University.

A $10 million commitment from Frannie and Jim Maguire ’58 (B.S.) became instrumental in securing the land that would eventually become the Maguire campus. In September 2008, they issued the Maguire Challenge, pledging an additional $5 million to match gifts of $100,000 or more to the Maguire Campus. Later, they revised the threshold to $50,000 to inspire more donors.

In the 18 months that followed, during the most challenging United States economic downturn in 75 years, the Maguire Challenge was met. Saint Joseph’s is grateful to the more than 35 individuals whose combined giving, ranging from $50K to $1M, totaled more than $5.7M in support of the new campus.

“The Maguire family’s dedication to and love for Saint Joseph’s has had a tremendous impact on our students and our future,” remarked University President Timothy R. Lannon, S.J. “Jim and Frannie’s leadership has enabled us to create opportunities we never could have imagined before the purchase of the Maguire Campus. We are grateful to them and to all the alumni who supported this visionary challenge to make Saint Joseph’s the best that it can be.”

“The Hogan Award is bestowed annually upon an alumnus or alumna who exemplifies Christian principles and outstanding loyal service to the University. The Ignatius Award recognizes a graduate within the last 20 years who has devoted efforts in the service and promotion of Saint Joseph’s and lives a life of “service for others” consistent with the principles of St. Ignatius of Loyola.”

“Lesly and Dan have truly lived lives as ‘men and women for others,’” stated Gina Mazzulla ‘90 (B.S.), Saint Joseph’s University Alumni Association president. “They have embraced the Jesuit ideal of service and used it to impact the lives of countless individuals both at Saint Joseph’s and in their local communities.”

A champion for the poor, D’Ambola has dedicated her life to the service and betterment of underserved populations in New Jersey. For the past decade, she has worked as medical director at St. Luke’s Catholic Medical Services in Camden, N.J., which provides a full range of medical and health services for the poor, uninsured and under-insured.

A former Hawk mascot and active student leader, Gallagher has remained intimately connected to his alma mater and spent four years as associate director of alumni relations at SJU after graduation. He has also taught as an adjunct professor, served as a reunion class volunteer and was a member of the inaugural National Alumni Board. Vice president of learning and development operations at Comcast, he helped design and still leads the University’s National Community Day program.

More than 150 alumni, spanning more than six decades, and current graduate students gathered on October 14 for the inaugural Hawk2Hawk Professional Networking event sponsored by the Haub School of Business. Among those in attendance were Christine Kaczmar-Russo ’83, ’96, Ryan Byrnes ‘09, Alexandra Bretschneider ’09 and graduate students Courtney Nix and Rovetta McKinney.

Mike McHale ‘98 and Bobby Gallagher ‘98 were among nearly 200 alumni and friends who enjoyed Soar to the Shore at La Costa in Sea Isle City, N.J., on August 21.

To view photos from these and other alumni events, visit sju.edu/alumni/photogalleries.

The Development and Alumni Relations team welcomed two new staff members during the summer. Scott Fremont ’02 (B.A.), joined the department as associate director of athletic development, and Ken Glenn ’08 (B.S.) serves as associate director of alumni relations/regional programs.

A former baseball standout at his alma mater, Fremont comes to SJU after serving as director of the annual fund at Malvern Preparatory School. Prior to that, he spent two years as director of athletic marketing and assistant baseball coach at Lake Erie College in Ohio, where he earned a master’s degree in business administration in 2007. In his new role, he will coordinate fundraising and alumni events for many of the SJU athletic programs as well as the Hawk Athletic Fund.

Glenn will work to establish and expand regional alumni clubs throughout the country and provide programming within those cities, focusing primarily on Boston, New York and Washington, D.C.. He most recently served as development coordinator of the Catholic Leadership Institute in Wayne, Pa. As an SJU undergraduate, Glenn spent two years as a Development and Alumni Relations student assistant and was a member of the Senior Challenge Committee.
Dozens of members from the Class of 1960 prepared to join May’s commencement procession and be inducted as Golden Hawks, a highlight of their 50th reunion celebration weekend on campus.

To view photos from these and other alumni events, visit www.sju.edu/alumni/photogalleries.

SJU WELCOMES JOHN P. McNULTY SCHOLARS IN SCIENCE AND MATH

Saint Joseph’s University and Anne Welsh McNulty announced the second cohort of young women to receive the John P. McNulty Scholarship for Excellence in Science and Math in September. The three scholars, Catherine Elorette ’14 of Cedar Knolls, N.J., Annamarie Everman ’14 of Philadelphia, Pa., and Lisa Mariani ’14 of Delran, N.J., will each receive a four-year, full-tuition, merit-based scholarship.

The scholarship program is especially suited to Saint Joseph’s dedication to creating a culture that nurtures women’s professional success. “McNulty Scholars are those young women who dare to be the best,” says Anne Welsh McNulty, whose generous support of the program honors her late husband, alumnus John P. McNulty ’74 (B.S.). “John exuded energy, creativity and ambition. Through this program, we hope to ignite the same extraordinary spirit in others.” At the core of the McNulty Scholars program is the ambition to create a challenging learning environment that will inspire recipients to reach the top ranks of science and math professions.

McNulty Scholars with Anne Welsh McNulty (center) include (from left): Lisa Mariani ’14, Annamarie Everman ’14, Corinna Noel ’13, Maura Southwell ’13, Kim Nguyen ’13 and Catherine Elorette ’14.

LAW ALUMNI PRESENT CORR ’58 WITH GEM AWARD, ELECT NEW OFFICERS

The Saint Joseph’s University Law Alumni Chapter named Martin Corr, Esq. ’58 (B.A.), as its 2010 Gem Award recipient in May. The award is presented annually to a graduate who displays great loyalty to the University while focusing his or her career on helping others. In addition, the chapter awarded a post-graduate scholarship to Jacob Crockett ’10 (B.A.), who is attending law school.

Corr received his juris doctorate from Temple University School of Law in 1961. He served as a judge advocate in the U.S. Air Force for three years and entered private practice in Philadelphia in 1965. He joined a Bucks County, Pa., firm in 1971 and established his own firm in 1983. For the first 35 years, Corr specialized in personal injury litigation, representing both plaintiffs and defendants, and since then has expanded his practice to include estate planning and administration.

The chapter also installed new officers, including president Dawn Tancredi, Esq. ’96 (B.A.), vice president Mary Kay Kelm, Esq. ’89 (B.A.), secretary Denise Susan Vicario, Esq. ’93 (B.A.), and treasurer Joseph M. Nardi III, Esq. ’80 (B.S.).

GALLAGHER GOLF OUTING RAISES SUPPORT FOR ALUMNI MENTORING

Nearly 100 golfers, including eight members of the class of 1954 — (from left) Jim Dever, Bill Henderson, John Fitzpatrick, Charlie Mungan, Mike Dunn, Tom McKeon, Lou Keeler and Gerry O’Connor — took to the links at Huntingdon Valley (Pa.) Country Club to participate in the third annual Jack Gallagher ’63 Memorial Alumni Golf Outing on July 19. Proceeds from the event benefit networking and mentorship opportunities for current students and young alumni and the Saint Joseph’s University Alumni Association.

CLASS OF 1960 INDUCTED AS GOLDEN HAWKS

Dozens of members from the Class of 1960 prepared to join May’s commencement procession and be inducted as Golden Hawks, a highlight of their 50th reunion celebration weekend on campus.

To view photos from these and other alumni events, visit www.sju.edu/alumni/photogalleries.
THERE’S NO PLACE LIKE HOME FOR ALUMNI
CELEBRATING REUNION 2010

The weekend’s signature events took place Saturday night, featuring a Mass and welcome from University President Timothy R. Lannon, S.J. During the program, class fundraising chairs presented Fr. Lannon with a combined reunion class gift check for $1,752,386. Afterward, class celebrations were held throughout Campion Student Center, offering alumni the opportunity to reconnect with friends and former classmates.

Reunion Class Committee Chairs present Fr. Lannon with a check for $1.7 million. Pictured are Joseph Nardi ’80, Honor Jones ’90, Tom Jones ’90, Dennis Sheehan ’85, Michael Nesspor ’80, Fr. Lannon, Gina DelMonte ’05, James Pfizenmayer ’70, Charles Waldecker ’75, James McLaughlin ’70. (Not pictured: Charles McKee ’65, Julius Aguila ’95, Lauren DiChiacchio ’00).

1953

Alphonse J. DiGiovanni, M.D. (B.S.), celebrated his 53rd wedding anniversary with wife Rose on June 29. They have five children and 10 grandchildren. DiGiovanni retired after a 35-year career as a general and vascular surgeon at the Mercy Catholic Medical Center (Pa.). He is also an aviation medical examiner and a general aviation pilot with 1,600 flight hours. DiGiovanni still participates in and organizes SJU’s annual Physician Physiology Lecture Series, which is primarily for systemic physiology students and is offered in cooperation with the biology department each spring.

1958

Thomas Humphrey (B.S.) retired after a 50-year career in education. He began in 1960 in the Trenton, N.J., public schools, where he advanced from teaching English to becoming vice principal at the high school. Humphrey later embarked on a 12-year stint teaching at Notre Dame Catholic High School in Lawrenceville, N.J.

1960

John R. Murphy (B.S.) is retired and resides with wife Patricia in Longport, N.J.

1961

Ernest F. Kosching (B.S.) worked as assistant principal at Northeast Catholic High School in Philadelphia for 32 years until it closed in June. He served as a liaison for its students as they transitioned to other Catholic high schools in Philadelphia.

1962

Joseph A. Lannon, Ph.D. (B.S.), retired in June as director of the U.S. Army’s Armament Research, Development and Engineering Center, a post he had held since 2005. He served in the Army for nearly 44 years and was a member of the Senior Executive Service for 19 years.

Mgr. Daniel McGlynn (B.A.) was appointed as chaplain to His Holiness with the title of monsignor as of January 30, 2010. His installation was celebrated on May 30 at St. John the Beloved Parish in Wilmington, Del.

1964

Hon. Frank T. Hazel (B.A.) is a judge on the Court of Common Pleas of Delaware County, Pa. He presided as the chief judge for an appellate simulation of SJU’s Honors Introduction to Law class, taught by Bill McDevitt, associate professor of management, last spring. The students argued their position before Judge Hazel on behalf of their assigned party in cases that were pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.

1965

John Moscatelli (B.S.), chief operating officer and senior vice president of Anne Klein Communications Group in Mount Laurel, N.J., was named 2010 Public Relations Professional of the Year by the New Jersey chapter of the Public Relations Society of America.

1969

Joe John (B.S.) retired as second vice president of marketing from Monumental Life after working in the insurance industry for more than 32 years. He resides in Kentucky, where a family of hawks has adopted a sycamore tree on his property.

Tom McCandless (B.S.) accepted an appointment to the board of consultants for The Florida Orchestra. He and wife Patsie live in Dunedin, Fla.

1970

Stanley Goldis (B.S.), a CPA and partner with Citrin Cooperman & Co. in Philadelphia, was thanked by the Bala Cynwyd, Pa., Library for providing pro bono tax return services since 1992. He also handles advisory pro bono work for Chasdei Eliyahu, a Wynnewood, Pa., nonprofit that accepts donations for the needy in the Greater Philadelphia area. He serves on the endowment committee for Torah Academy of Greater Philadelphia and on the board of directors for the Stern Hebrew High School in Philadelphia. He was honored at the inaugural dinner of Ohr Shalom Synagogue, in Ramat Beit Shemesh, Israel, for his efforts to establish a permanent facility there. An avid cyclist, Goldis has participated in the Wheels of Love bicycle ride to benefit Alyn Hospital in Jerusalem.

E-mail us at alumni@sju.edu and we’ll keep you in touch with the latest SJU happenings!

To submit information for Alum Notes, send an e-mail or visit www.sju.edu/alumni. The magazine’s policy is to print as many Alum Notes in each issue as space and timeliness permit. Submissions may be edited for length and content.
The Most Rev. Joseph P. McFadden ’69 (B.S.) had many callings as a college student and young adult. He majored in political science at Saint Joseph’s University, taught at Philadelphia’s West Catholic High School and seriously considered a career as a basketball coach, but it was his calling to the priesthood that he ultimately followed.

That call has taken him to Harrisburg, Pa., where, in August, following an appointment by Pope Benedict XVI, he was ordained the 10th bishop of the Harrisburg diocese, succeeding Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades who was transferred to the Fort Wayne-South Bend, Ind., diocese. In this role, Bishop McFadden will head the 89 parishes and more than 232,000 parishioners spread out over the diocese’s 15 counties.

“I am deeply humbled by the confidence that Pope Benedict has placed in me in appointing me as the shepherd of this particular Church,” Bishop McFadden said at a press conference following the announcement of his appointment. “I thank almighty God for the many blessings He has bestowed upon me through the course of my life. This has been a lifelong journey that has led me to Harrisburg.”

While at Saint Joseph’s, Bishop McFadden majored in political science and played on the freshman basketball team. He also coached the freshman basketball team for St. Thomas More High School and was a junior varsity coach for West Catholic High School for Boys. Following his Saint Joseph’s graduation, McFadden was hired as a teacher and basketball coach at West Catholic, and in 1972, he was appointed the school’s athletic director and also served on the Philadelphia Catholic League’s board of directors.

“I might well have wound up a college basketball coach, because coaching was my passion growing up,” Bishop McFadden told The Daily Item of Sunbury, Pa. “There was every indication that after going to Saint Joseph’s University in Philadelphia, I would become an NCAA coach. And I would have been happy in that profession.”

The pull to the priesthood was stronger, though, and Bishop McFadden was ordained a priest in 1981, after earning a master of divinity degree, summa cum laude, from St. Charles Seminary that same year. His first appointment was as parochial vicar at St. Laurence Parish in Highland Park, Pa., and in 1982, he was appointed administrative secretary to Cardinal John Krol. He also served as the first president of Cardinal O’Hara High School in Springfield, Pa., and pastor of St. Joseph Parish in Downingtown, Pa. In 2004, he was appointed Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia, with responsibility for oversight of Catholic education in the diocese. He recently oversaw the Philadelphia Archdiocese’s Heritage of Faith-Vision of Hope capital campaign, which has surpassed $175 million in pledges and is expected to reach its stated goal of $200 million.

Reflecting on his decision to become a priest, Bishop McFadden says that caring for the Church has been a great joy. “There’s no more exciting or worthy choice. The Lord has called me to places I never thought I’d be.”

— Compiled by Tom Clark ’10 (B.A.)
IN MEMORY

Edmond Wroblewski (B.S.) was appointed vice president of medical affairs and chief medical officer for the Cottage Health System, a four-hospital health system in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Richard J. “Jim” Bailey (B.S.) was inducted into the Defense Logistics Agency Hall of Fame in May 2010 during a ceremony at McNamara Headquarters Complex in Fort Belvoir, Va. Rising to become deputy commander of the Defense Supply Center, a position he held for seven years until his retirement in 2007, Bailey helped lead the center’s evolution from a general supply center to the Defense Department’s head aviation supply center. He also managed an inventory of $3.3 billion in annual sales and led a workforce of more than 2,900 military and civilian personnel at 11 locations.

Juan L. Alborg, father of Concha, Ph.D., professor emerita of foreign languages and literature
Cindy Bradley, wife of Jerry, Academy of Food Marketing
John Cooley, son of Sheryl, Office of Mission
Theresa Horan, sister of Dolores McCaughan, Drexel Library
Marilyn J. Jacobitz, mother of Gerard, Ph.D., assistant professor of theology
Florence Mulkern, mother of Joanne Kearney, Admissions
Charles F. Taylor Jr., father of Matt, Information Technology
Alice O’Brien, mother of Patrick, Haub School Associate Dean
Margaret Wellman, mother of Beverly Owsk, Administrative Services
James J. Kelly, M.D. ’35
Francis J. DiIenno ’40, brother of Thomas ’56 and father of Donald ’65
George H. Koch Jr. ’42
Curtis E. “Bud” Mapes ’43
William J. Hoy ’46
Stanley A. Bodalski ’49, professor emeritus of finance, father of Gerald ’74, Joseph ’75 and Ann ’88
Michael T. Giah, son of William T. ’49 (deceased) and brother of James, D.O. ’79, and John ’75
Donald F. Smith ’50, father of Robert ’79
Col. John C. Hartman ’51, father of John ’69
Francis J. Hoffa ’52
John H. Bruno Jr. ’54
Thomas J. McHugh ’54
Clinton G. Guishard ’55, father of Vincent ’92 and Michael ’95
Richard Kolecki, M.D. ’55
Donald M. O’Halloran ’55
Mary Jane Ilsemann, sister of Hank ’56, David ’56, Arthur ’50 and Edward Quinn ’49 (all deceased), mother of Mary Jane Patchen, M.D. ’77, Anne ’80, Susan ’82 and Eleanor ’84

Ed. note: In the print edition, In Memory incorrectly listed William J. Hoy ’63, instead of the alumnus with the same name from the Class of ’46. SIU Magazine is deeply sorry for the error.

1974

Joanne Judge (B.S.) of Lancaster, Pa., is co-chair of the health care department at Stevens & Lee, a professional services firm. She practices out of the firm’s Reading, Pa., office and was a presenter at the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants Tax Conference this year.

1975

Glenn R. Ortley, D.O. (B.S.) was elected to serve on the board of trustees of the Pennsylvania Osteopathic Medical Association, a statewide organization for physicians holding the doctor of osteopathic medicine (D.O.) degree. Board certified in family practice and geriatrics, Ortley is medical director of ManorCare in Yeadon, Pa., and the Delaware County (Pa.) Memorial Hospital Home Care Services program.

1976

Timothy Fallon (B.S.), was appointed president and CEO of Columbus Foods, a Hayward, Calif.-based manufacturer of Italian-style salame and premium deli meats. A 34-year industry veteran, he had served as president and general manager of Kettle Foods North America since 2005.

Bob Meyer (B.S.) is the 2010 Ringside Middleweight World Champion in the masters boxing division, which took place August 2-7, 2010, in Kansas City, Mo. More than 1,400 fighters from 13 countries competed at the event.

Michael F. Shank, D.O. (B.S.), was named a top doctor in family medicine by Main Line Today magazine for the fourth time. Shank is an associate professor in the geriatrics and anatomy department at the Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine and practices with Rose Tree Medical Associates in Media, Pa.
THE HON. WILLIAM DIRK WARREN ’50

An American Hero

Many have never heard of Liechtenstein, a small German-speaking country tucked between Switzerland and Austria in Western Europe, but one Saint Joseph’s alumnus knows it well. The Hon. William Dirk Warren ’50 (B.S.) is consul general of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg in the Principality of Liechtenstein.

What would lead a boy from Camden, N.J., to this obscure location? It began when he joined the U.S. Army in 1943 at the age of 18. His service would take him to France and Germany during World War II, where he proved to be a valiant and faithful soldier.

The most recent of his many awards was bestowed this year, an appointment as Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the French Republic.

“We will never forget the commitment of American heroes like you to whom France owes so much,” wrote Phillipe Lalliot, consul general of France in New York, in a congratulatory letter.

Warren has also received the Combat Infantry Badge, Distinguished Unit Badge, American Service Medal, World War II Victory Medal, Good Conduct Medal, European African Middle Eastern Service Medal, Silver Star, State of New Jersey Distinguished Service Medal and Bronze Star.

After an honorable discharge in 1946 and graduation from Saint Joseph’s in 1950, Warren moved on to a successful business career in Germany. A former Trustee, Shield of Loyola awardee and an honorary degree recipient, Warren also endowed the University’s Sesquicentennial Chair.

— Molly Harty

1977

Valerie (Keefe) Baseline (M.S. ’81) is laboratory manager for Nu Star Asphalt in Paulsboro, N.J., and quality manager for the Paulsboro Refinery and 13 terminals. Her daughter is a 2010 SJU graduate.

Muffett (O’Brien) McGraw (B.S.), Notre Dame University’s head women’s basketball coach, was named to the 2011 Women’s Basketball Hall of Fame. She was the 2001 consensus national coach of the year and has won more than 600 games in her career, which includes 23 seasons at Notre Dame. McGraw had previously been inducted into SJU’s Women’s Basketball Hall of Fame and Athletics Hall of Fame, as well as the Philadelphia Big Five Women’s Hall of Fame.

Stephen F. Stefano (B.A.) has published Passion and Ice (www.stevestefano.com), a book about values in leadership.

1978

Mike Teti (B.S.) was featured as one of the “Greatest American Coaches of All Time” in the July 2010 issue of Rowing News. He has rowed on a dozen national teams and gone to the Olympics three times. As coach of the U.S. men’s eight, Teti won three consecutive gold medals and gone to the Olympics three times. As coach of the U.S. men’s eight to a world record and gold medal.

1980

Stephen F. Gambescia, Ph.D. (B.S.), was elected to the Delaware County Community College Board of Trustees. He recently became a grandfather to Kellen, son of Stephanie (B.B.A. ’05).

1981

Bob Bowman (B.A.) was appointed Mid-Atlantic regional managing director for Merrill Lynch. He is active at SJU as a member of the Haub School advisory board, the Board of Trustees development committee and the Presidential Scholarship fundraising council and is a member of Alpha Sigma Nu, the Jesuit Honor Society. Bowman has held leadership positions in many civic organizations including Principal for a Day, specifically serving the Parkway Center City High School in Philadelphia. He and wife Marybeth (Zane, B.S. ’82) have two daughters, Allie and Katie, and twin boys, Ryan and Kyle.

1982

Carl J. Minniti Jr., M.D. (B.S.) received the 2010 David King Community Clinical Scientist Award from the Association of Community Cancer Centers, a national recognition for outstanding service, leadership and commitment to the oncology community in the area of clinical research. He has a private practice specializing in medical oncology and hematology in southern New Jersey. Minniti holds staff privileges at Underwood Memorial Hospital in Woodbury, N.J., and South Jersey Hospital in Vineland and Elmer, N.J. He and wife Irene (Perez, B.S. ’83) are the parents of Cristina and Carl III (B.S. ’10).

1983

Missy McNamara Quinn (B.S.) of Mt. Laurel, N.J., has been director of recruitment for almost 13 years at Contemporary Staffing Solutions in Philadelphia, Pa. She is the proud mom of Naval Officer Patrick William Quinn and daughters Meghan Anne and Kathleen Joan.

1984

Jamie Maguire (B.S.), Philadelphia Insurance Companies chairman and CEO, was named the 2010 Greater Philadelphia Region’s Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of the Year in the financial services category. An SJU Trustee, he will advance to the national awards in November, which had not yet happened at the time this magazine went to press.

Patrick D. Mahoney (B.A.) assumed the newly created position of chief marketing officer for IEEE, the world’s largest professional association advancing technology for humanity. He oversees its sales, marketing and product management groups as well as the public visibility initiative. For the previous 12 years, Mahoney was with Standard and Poor’s as vice president, ratings operations.

1985

Mary Ann Plankinton (B.A.) practices law in Delaware and Pennsylvania in the areas of mediation, family law and estate law. She was named a top family lawyer by Main Line Today in 2009 and 2010.
William J. Wrabley (B.S.) has joined the staff of the Peace Corps in Washington, D.C. He recently returned from a yearlong deployment to Sinai, Egypt, on a peacekeeping tour patrolling the borders of Egypt, Israel and the Gaza Strip.

1986

Phil Bender (B.A., M.S. ’98) is a reading specialist at the Odyssey School in Baltimore County, Md. He and wife Amy live in their newly renovated 1920s Dutch Colonial home in Catonsville, Md., with daughter Aurielle Christine.

Steven K. Mignogna, Esq., (B.A.) was appointed chair of the probate and fiduciary litigation committee of the American Bar Association for a fourth consecutive year. A partner and shareholder of Archer & Greiner in Haddonfield, N.J., he focuses his practice on commercial litigation with a concentration on probate matters, estates, fiduciaries, guardianships and real estate.

1987

Phil Florio, S.J. (B.A., M.S. ’94) was appointed director of campus ministry at Fordham University in New York. He is also a candidate for a doctor of ministry, with a concentration in spiritual formation, at the Catholic University of America.

William F. Stewart (B.S.) joined Nelson Levine de Luca & Horst as a partner in its national insurance coverage group. Stewart, who specializes in first and third party insurance coverage matters, works in the firm’s Blue Bell (Pa.) office, serving clients throughout the United States and London markets.

1989

John Barney (M.B.A.) retired as senior vice president, finance, and CFO for UGI Utilities last summer, after nearly 40 years with the company.

1990

Joe Glennon (B.A.) began teaching in the Temple University School of Communications and Theater this fall.

1991

Peter L. Johnston, Esq., (B.A.) was elected to a four-year term on the Philadelphia Democratic City Committee for the 21st Ward, which encompasses the Roxborough and Manayunk sections.

Heather Simmons (B.A.) lives in Glassboro, N.J., with husband Jeff and two stepchildren, Mackenzie and Anthony. She owns Heather Simmons Communications, which specializes in school and non-profit community, media and public relations. Prior to that, she served for 13 years in the public relations and marketing department at Gloucester County College, where she was also an adjunct instructor.

ALUMNI RELATIONS OFFICE RETURNS TO CAMPUS

After nearly five years off campus, the Office of Alumni Relations took up residence in the newly dedicated Henry A. Quinn ’56 Hall on the James J. Maguire ’58 Campus in June. The new space reconnects the Alumni Association with the campus community and provides greater opportunities to engage with faculty and students. For more information on the Alumni Association or upcoming events, visit alumni.sju.edu, e-mail alumni@sju.edu or call 610-660-3201.

Patty Newby, Administrative Assistant; Megan (Halferty) Famular ’06, Associate Director/ Affinity Programs; Laura Brunette, Administrative Assistant; Tom Monaghan, Executive Director of Alumni Relations; Ken Glenn ’08, Associate Director/Regional Programs; and Becky Annechini, Associate Director/ Class Programs.
Attracting Diverse Audiences to Theater

When she graduated from SJU in 1977, Marcia Pendelton, a Philadelphia native, wouldn’t have told you that 23 years later she’d be working in theater. Or that she would have founded her own business, and that the business would thrive, celebrating its 10th anniversary this year. “A career like this wasn’t even on my radar back then,” she says. “No one was doing anything like it yet, so there wasn’t an example for me to follow.”

Pendelton’s New York City-based company, Walk Tall Girl Productions (WTGP, www.walktallgirlproductions.com), is a marketing, audience development and group sales company for the arts with special emphasis placed on the theater. From Broadway to off-Broadway, regional theater to educational and cultural programming, WTGP has been growing audiences for the past 10 years. But unlike similar companies, Pendelton focuses on more than numbers — she concentrates on bringing in a younger, more diverse audience.

“We live in a rich multicultural country,” says Pendelton. “I wanted Walk Tall Girl to support projects that brought audiences and artists of color into the theater.”

After graduating from SJU with her B.S. in sociology and minors in both community mental health services and English, Pendelton took jobs in human services. Nearly a decade later, she decided she wanted to return to theater, a passion she pursued throughout her life. At SJU, she had performed in the musicals “Promises, Promises” and “You’re a Good Man, Charlie Brown” and acted as producer and director for the Black Awareness Society. “I just stepped back after my human services jobs and realized [theater] is where I needed to be,” she says.

Pendelton began her career in the arts in 1988 with the Theater Center, a small organization in Philadelphia, followed by a stint at the Philadelphia Drama Guild. She moved on to pursue an M.F.A. in theater management at the University of Maryland, College Park, with the goal of becoming a marketing director at a nonprofit institution.

Upon graduation, Pendelton returned to Philadelphia to work on two short-term projects: August Wilson’s “Jitney” at Freedom Theatre, as associate producer, and the Philadelphia engagement of the first national tour of “Bring in Da Noise, Bring in Da Funk,” as an audience development consultant for the Shubert Organization. The “Noise/Funk” tour hired her as community outreach coordinator, and when the tour was over, she moved to New York City to work on her first Broadway show, “Kat and the Kings.”

“It became clear to me that I had my own vision about arts programming and events,” she says, “and established WTGP to make that vision a reality.”

Since its founding in 2000, WTGP has been recognized by the Black Public Relations Society for bringing in new audiences by the Black Theater Network, and as a Pioneer of the Arts by the Riant Theater Company. Pendelton also teaches a Marketing the Arts course at New York University’s School of Continuing and Professional Studies.

— Nicole Katze

1993

1994

Timothy Cifelli (B.S.) is the new owner and partner of Diccicco Battista Communications, a full-service advertising and public relations agency. He resides in Philadelphia with his wife and their two children.

1995

Charles Frederico, S.J. (B.S.), vocations director for the New York and Maryland provinces of the Society of Jesus, was featured in an article in the spring 2010 issue of Ignatian Imprints (www.mdsj.org/ignlmp/iispr2010vocation.pdf).

1996

Kelley (Amberson) O’Neill (B.S.) is director of sales for Medidata Solutions Worldwide, a clinical development software company based in New York, N.Y. She has three children: Jack, Ryan, and Allison Kate.

Lynda (Gass) Commale (B.S.) had articles published in The Philadelphia Inquirer (Aug. 8) and Redbook magazine (July) about her mosquito net distribution trip to Uganda and her family’s commitment to the Nothing But Nets campaign. Husband Anthony (B.S. ’95), a math teacher, received a Citadel Heart of Learning Award (2009-10) for involving his students in the campaign to combat malaria in Africa.

Bill Klaus (M.B.A.) and Conor Buckley (M.B.A.) who met while pursuing their M.B.A. degrees at SJU through a Wawa-sponsored program, are co-founders of Longship, an international commercial energy management company. Klaus is Longship’s CFO and chair of Sustainable Wenonah. Buckley was named Cork (Ireland) Person of the Year in 2009.
BIRTHS

Declan James, son of Erin (Farrell) ’04 and Kevin O’Donnell ’03, practices flapping for his future as the Hawk mascot.

Lucas to Mike Zambito ’85
Michael Richard to Susan (Moynihan, B.S. ’94) and Richard Cirucci (B.S. ’93)
George Philip to Kimberly (Alessi, B.S. ’97, M.S. ’98) and Matthew Clark
David to Jennifer (Cervone, B.A. ’97) and David Guarascia
Joseph Bogan to Amy and Matthew Nolan (B.S. ’97)
Kelly Genevieve to Donna (Kelly, B.A. ’98) and Nick Romero
Mason Daniel to Kristin (Kenny, B.S. ’98) and Daniel McKenna
Rhys Walker to Alison (Vivona, B.S. ’98) and Keith Fiore
Samantha Amy to Amy (Byrne, B.S. ’99, M.B.A. ’09) and Gregory Herm

For more information on all of the chapters listed here, or to start a new chapter, contact alumni@sju.edu. alumni.sju.edu/chapters

Thomas P. Nerney (M.B.A.), president and CEO of United States Liability Insurance Group, headquartered in Wayne, Pa., has been elected to the Cabrini College Board of Trustees. He is also a founding member of the not-for-profit organizations Good Sports of Wayne, A Front Row Seat to Learning and the Nerney Foundation. A former SJU Trustee, Nerney was inducted into the Erivan K. Haub School of Business Hall of Fame in May 2009.

Frank Reynolds (M.B.A.) was awarded Ireland’s “Life Science Top 50 Award,” presented by the president of Ireland, Mary McAleese, at Ireland’s Consulate General Office in New York City on May 20. Reynolds is CEO of Invivo Therapeutics Corp. in Cambridge, Mass., which was featured on National Geographic Television as a U.S. leader in tissue engineering. The company’s first appearance aired in June and covered their primate studies, and a second National Geographic show will air in March 2011 as a documentary on its human studies for spinal cord injury.

1997

Eileen Gadsden (B.S.) is president-elect of BDPA Philadelphia for the 2010-12 term. BDPA Philadelphia is the founding chapter for BDPA, a global organization focused on professional growth and technical development in the IT industry.

1998

Liza A. Stagliano (B.A.) was named partner at the law firm Kelley Jasons McGowan Spinelli & Hanna, LLP, in Philadelphia, Pa.

Brian Sweeney, Ph.D. (B.A.), is assistant professor of English at the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth. He earned his doctorate in English in May from Brown University.

1999

Paul A. Mailshanker, D.D.S. (M.B.A.), is a staff dentist at the Mills Dental Clinic at Fort Dix in New Jersey. This year, he celebrated his 46th anniversary with wife Marlene. They have two daughters and four grandchildren.
Saint Joseph’s University continues to lead by offering specialized areas of study to all its students – from full-time and non-traditional students, to working professionals and executives. Saint Joseph’s designs flexible and convenient career-centric programs for today’s demanding lifestyles.

Many are already familiar with SJU’s institutes and centers of excellence such as the Center for Food Marketing and the Pedro Arrupe Center for Business Ethics at the Haub School, or the Criminal Justice and Public Safety Institute and Institute of Catholic Bioethics in the College of Arts and Sciences. More recent additions are the Kinney Center for Autism Education and Support and the Academy of Risk Management and Insurance.

These centers transfer specialized knowledge to faculty, alumni and the regional community, informing both curriculum development and program delivery. As a result, Saint Joseph’s boasts such forward-looking programs as Health Care Ethics, Autism Studies and the new “Haub Online,” which offers convenient delivery of the MBA and M.S. in Financial Services. With these exciting new learning opportunities, anyone can turn in-class excellence into life-long purpose right here on Hawk Hill.
2000

Colleen (Durkin) Miller (B.S.) was named COO of Indian Creek Foundation. She has been with the Foundation since 2004 and currently holds the position of director of development. Miller resides in Quakertown, Pa., with husband Stephen (B.A. ’00) and family.

2001

Edward Harris (B.S.) completed the Boston College MBA program in 2009. In April 2010, he joined the brand management team at Under Armour, headquartered in Baltimore, Md., after working for nine years in brand marketing roles at And 1 Basketball, Converse and Timberland. He and wife Kristin relocated to the Baltimore area.

Kelly M. MacCreedy (B.A.), a member of the litigation department of Obermayer Rebmann Maxwell & Hippel, was named as one of Pennsylvania’s “2010 Rising Stars” for the second year. She was featured in the June editions of Philadelphia magazine and Pennsylvania Super Lawyers magazine.

Julia (Price) Nickey (B.S.) has worked for Teleflex for the past four years. She and husband Chris have a daughter, Vivian Louise.

Greg Santarsiero (B.A.) was co-director of “Ice Grill, USA,” an award-winning independent film, which won the Overall Best of Festival and the Honeymoon Award for New Jersey-Based Films at the inaugural Atlantic City International Film and Music Festival on September 11.

2002

Charles J. Kocher, Ed.D. (M.A., Ed.D. ’07), was appointed dean for business, education, social sciences and justice at Cumberland Community College in Vineland, N.J.

Devlin Morrison (M.B.A.) completed an assignment as a primary care vaccine business manager and was promoted to global marketing communications manager for HIV at Merck. He is now responsible for leading the development and implementation of the global marketing communications strategy for the HIV franchise.

Jill Ormandy (B.S.) earned her juris doctor degree from Villanova University School of Law.

2003

David T. O’Gurek, M.D. (B.S.) was among 12 family medicine residents in the United States to receive the American Academy of Family Physicians Excellence in Graduate Medical Education Award. He is a third-year resident at Lancaster (Pa.) General.

2005

Michael Lello (M.A.) won a second-place Keystone Press Award in the feature-beat category in Division VI for his music coverage. It was the first Keystone Award for the Weekender, an arts and entertainment weekly in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he has been editor for three years. Lello is also a freelance writer and lives in Scranton, Pa.

2006

Adam Lynch (M.B.A.) started his own company, Top Dog Medical Sales, an exclusive job board for medical sales professionals looking to further their careers and new graduates looking for careers in the medical sales industry (www.TopDogMedicalSales.com).

2007

Michael J. Kaiser (M.S.) received his Ph.D. in public policy with a health policy track from the University of Maryland Baltimore County. He plans to work for the U.S. government in a research capacity.

Michael Schult (B.S.) began classes this fall at Yale University toward an M.B.A. degree.

2008

Valerie Jane Owens (M.S.) published America Huh! I’m Going Home, the true story of a young graduate student’s journey to Africa, where she experiences homelessness, loss and being set up to be sold (www.americahuh.com).

2009

Mark Bidoli (M.B.A.) was relocated to Hickman, Williams & Co. to work out of its Cranberry Township location.

Breakfast of Champions: Why I strive to bring local foods into the classroom

It’s a Thursday morning, and my students are cracking hard-boiled eggs. They’re seated at a long table in Wolfington Hall, sipping coffee, spreading butter on crusty bread and drizzling honey over apples. “I’ve never had raw milk before,” Greg says, pouring a tall glass. “It smells grassy.” He takes a gulp, then smiles at his classmates across the table. Several others follow suit.

Today, my students and I are going local. We’ve prepared a breakfast using ingredients sourced from within 100 miles of campus. The coffee comes from Old City Coffee, a local roaster. The butter and eggs come from nearby Amish farms. The beautiful bread was just baked this morning by Metropolitan, one of Philadelphia’s best bakeries, and even the honey comes from local bees. We’re seeing what it means to be locavores, a term author and food activist Michael Pollan uses in his book, The Omnivore’s Dilemma, which we’re reading. A locavore, my students have learned, refers to someone who eats sustainably by drawing on regional food sources, from farmers markets to homegrown veggies.

Since I joined the faculty five years ago, Saint Joseph’s University has come a long way in its efforts to become sustainable. Recycling bins dot the hallways of most buildings, and there’s a sustainability committee along with a regular column in The Hawk, the student newspaper, that addresses these issues. Still, I’m struck by how little my students think about conserving resources. Few of them see the value of recycling, and several of them have expressed disdain for “going green” — a fad, they say, a joke.

Last spring, I offered a food writing class. I wanted to draw on my background as a former newspaper food writer, but I also wanted to create a space to explore sustainable food practices. I figured, why not approach it through the stomach?

At a third of the way through the semester, my students begin to question not just what they eat (mostly processed foods) but also how it gets to their table — according to Pollan, most food travels an average of 1,500 miles to our plates. As a class, we’ve logged our diet and learned that 90 percent of what we eat is corn-based, from high-fructose corn syrup in soda to corn-fed beef. In just a few weeks, my students have become conscientious eaters. We’ve discussed the economics of industrial food production and why it costs so little to buy corn-based snack foods but how they take a toll on our health. For every child born in 2000, Pollan writes, one in three will be diagnosed with diabetes.

Molly bites into a Pink Lady apple. She wonders aloud whether the farmer earns a living wage. Kyle asks her to pass the butter. “This is the best butter I’ve ever eaten,” he says, then asks, “Why doesn’t all butter taste this good?” Victoria salts her egg. She comments on the deep yellow color of the yolk. “Organic,” she says. “Hmmm.”

In a few weeks, these students will ride the train to Reading Terminal Market to begin work on their second major paper: an investigation into a single ingredient. They’ll be required to research it, cook it and feed it to their friends or family. Kyle will cook venison with his father. Molly will prepare chickpea curry for her mother. Victoria will visit a beekeeper and become mildly obsessed with learning to harvest honey. She’ll bring honey-sweetened truffles to class.

After that, we’ll visit the Chestnut Hill Restaurant School as undercover reviewers. My students will covertly photograph their three-course meals and sneak off to the bathroom to jot down details. They’ll look up words like demi-glace and sabayon. But the best moment will be when they return to class with their reviews in hand, and Molly will ask Kyle, “So, how much of that meal do you think was local?” Then I’ll know they’ve internalized something more than rich sauces.

I don’t expect my students to turn into locavores or to stop eating junk food. But I do believe there’s value in self-examination, and that includes diet. How do our food choices impact our bodies and the world around us? What is the value in buying a local apple over one trucked in from California? Why is the raw milk that our grandparents drank illegal in most states? What’s really in a Lean Pocket? Our students have voracious appetites, not just for food but for answers to these questions.

So, why not apply cura personalis to the stomach?

— Tenaya Darlington, M.F.A.

Tenaya Darlington is an assistant professor of English. She also blogs for Madame Fromage (madamefromage.blogspot.com), serves as a writing consultant for Di Bruno Bros., and writes a local cheese column for Grid Magazine.

To view how one student incorporated these ideas into a final project for this class, visit Daniel Westiner’s ongoing local food blog, Earth & Fork (www.earthandfork.blogspot.com).
Alumni Appalachia

A small but determined group of men and women journeyed to Phelps, Ky., last summer to help finish construction on a Habitat for Humanity house. They were part of Alumni Appalachia, a week of service and community building for Saint Joseph’s graduates and friends, and an outgrowth of the undergraduate Appalachian Experience. Seven individuals participated in 2010: Ken Glenn ’08, Erin Dalton Taylor ’03, ’10, Steve Klarich ’03, Ann Pelicata ’06, brothers Tony ’03 and Andy Moral ’06 and their father, Armando.

Under less-than-clear Kentucky skies, they pushed their bodies to complete their task — a stretch for many of them, who had never worked in construction — and in the process, opened their minds and hearts to absorb the unexpected beauty around them, even as they appreciated their lives at home.

The Alumni Association invites alumni, friends and family members to participate in Alumni Appalachia 2011. For more information: www.sju.edu/alumni/stay-connected/get-involved/service/initiatives/appalachia.

“It’s a culture shock to see how little some people in the region have. That being said, the thing that is most impressive when I visit is how happy and thankful they are that people take the time to come down and help out such a great cause like Habitat.”

— Ken Glenn ’08, who has made two trips with Alumni Appalachia

“This trip truly gets better and better every year and reinforces what really is important in life.”

— Steve Klarich ’03, on his fifth trip with Alumni Appalachia

“My favorite part of the trip was being able to relive the ‘Appalachia Experience’ I had as an undergrad — but with my father and brother this time. Sharing this week with them was a memorable experience for me.”

— Andy Moral ’06, who participated in Alumni Appalachia with his brother Tony ’03 and father Armando

“Getting to meet the family that would eventually be moving into the house was the best experience. It really made our work feel meaningful.”

— Tony Moral ’03, who has led the Alumni Appalachia team for five of the last six years

(From top) Alumni Appalachia has returned to the same site in Phelps, Ky., for the past six summers to help with the construction of a Habitat for Humanity house. First helping to lay the foundation, alumni moved on to clear the earth for a drainage system, before working on the house itself. They attended to the finishing touches, and a family moved in shortly after they left.

(Left) Standing, left to right: Armando Moral, Phelps Habitat representatives Ronnie and Archie, Andy Moral ’06, Steve Klarich ’03; front: Tony Moral ’03, Erin Dalton Taylor ’03, ’10, Ann Pelicata ’06, Ken Glenn ’08.
The Erivan K. Haub School of Business presents

Mary Lou (Finlayson) Quinlan ’75
Executive Lecture and Book Signing
Author, Time Off for Good Behavior, How Hardworking Women Can Take a Break and Change Their Lives and What She’s Not Telling You, Why Women Hide the Whole Truth and What Marketers Can Do About It
December 2, 2010, 5:30 PM
Wolfington Teletorium®, Mandeville Hall

SJU Women’s Leadership Council
Panel Discussion
“Strategies for Approaching the Best Business Decisions with Confidence”
February 28, 2011, 5:30 PM
Haub Executive Center, McShain Hall, 5th Floor

21st Annual Erivan K. Haub School of Business Hall of Fame Dinner
Honoring Gerianne Tringali DiPiano ’92 MBA
Founder, President and CEO of FemmePharma Global Healthcare, Inc.
April 7, 2011, 6:00 PM

Presented by the Erivan K. Haub School of Business and co-sponsored by the SJU Women’s Leadership Council, Hawk Women and the American Marketing Association.
For more information, visit www.sju.edu/academics/hsb/spiritofwomen or contact Ryan Hammond at 610-660-1390 or rhammond@sju.edu.
PRIDE